LAUNDRYMAN WAS A GOVERNOR

In Charge of Province in Philippine Islands for Nine Months.

J. B. Coleman, Columbia negro, was military governor of Trinidad province of Luzon, P. I., from September 1900, and was sent with the first lieutenant in the Forty-eighth U. S. Infantry.

You may see Coleman any day at the laundry which bears his name on Park avenue and of which he is proprietor.

Coleman was born in Pike County sixty-one years ago and lived on a farm for twenty years. He read a great deal. After he had reached manhood, he went to Jefferson City and spent six years in school and working. At the end of this time he was graduated from the Lincoln Institute. He then went to Moberly where he had been elected principal of the negro schools. He served in this capacity for the following nine years until the Spanish-American War broke out.

He enlisted in the army as a private and was commissioned a first lieutenant July 26, 1898. The regiment to which he was attached was on its way to Cuba when the war ended and was mustered out at a southern camp. Coleman was recommissioned on request shortly afterward and sent to the Philippine Islands.

He arrived in Manila January 25, 1900 and was sent with the first platoon of his company to the Trinidad province of Luzon as military and civil governor. He served as governor of the province for nine months, at the end of which time he received orders to assemble his troops and prepare to return them to United States.

On returning to the United States and being discharged from the service, Coleman was elected principal of the negro schools of Columbia and served for eight years. He then went into the laundry business and has followed it ever since. He is a local leader among his people. Among other social political and church duties he is superintendent of the Sunday school of the African Methodist Church of Columbia.

Mrs. Carr Is Married to C. M. Goslin. Mrs. Christine Carr of Fulton was married to C. M. Goslin of Columbia Sunday, by the Rev. R. S. Cunningham.
